SEVENOAKS TRAGEDY.

SUICIDE OF GENERAL LUARD.

HIS MIND UNHINGED.

BY ACCUSATIONS OF MURDER.

LONDON, Sept. 18.
Further details regarding the death of Major-General Luard, whose wife was murdered in a summer house in a lonely wood, near Sevenoaks, Kent, on August 24, show that Major-General Luard, after spending Thursday night at Harham Court as the guest of Colonel Ward, M.P., threw himself under a train at West Parleigh before breakfast.

He left letters declaring that he was unable any longer to bear the awful accusation that he had killed his wife.

Several newspapers had hinted this suspicion, owing to the absence of clues.

Sept. 19.

Major-General Luard was the recipient of many letters containing terrible insinuations. He wrote to Colonel Ward, denouncing his traducers in heart-broken terms. General Luard's only surviving son, Captain C. E. Luard, D.S.O. (Norfolk Regiment), lands at Southampton from South Africa to-day.

Later.

Major-General Luard complained bitterly of the scandalous nature of the questions addressed to him at the inquest on the body of his wife. He received dozens of anonymous letters directly accusing him of the murder. His friends advised him to treat the letters with contempt, but his last letter stated: "I am sick of the scandalous and lying reports. I cannot face my son. I have decided to end my life."

General Luard left several letters and telegrams to Colonel Ward, to his housekeeper, and to others, indicating that he intended to commit suicide, and directing that his body be removed to Barham-court.

The driver of the train, seeing General Luard about to jump in front of the engine, tried, but vainly, to stop the train.

Internal public sympathy is now evinced for General Luard.

Sept. 20.

Colonel Ward went to Southampton yesterday, met Captain Luard on arrival, and broke the news of the death of his father. Later Captain Luard was present at the inquest.

The jury returned a verdict that General Luard committed suicide while temporarily insane.

AN IMPERIAL COUNCIL.

ADVOCATED BY MR. TAVERNER.

The newspapers comment the excellent display made by Victoria at the Grocer's Exhibition, Ilford.

Mr. J. W. Taverner, Agent-General for Victoria, in presiding at the inaugural dinner, urged that the establishment of an Imperial Council was indispensable to the adoption of an Imperial policy. If the King visited Australia he would be received with never-to-be-forgotten enthusiasm.

The latest news of Dr. Stein previous to that was of his arrival at Khotan. From Khotan he travelled westwards on his way to that place were dated June 4, and stated that, having finished winter and spring work, which extended to the north of the Tarim River, he started towards the middle of April on a thousand-mile march across the desert to the distant country and to rapidly increasing heat. By August he expected to pack his heavy train collections, and to start for Lashkar on route to India. ## NAVY FOR AUSTRALIA.

ECSTATIC AMBITIONS.

CAUSE OF IMPERIAL UNITY.

LONDON, Sept. 19.

The "Spectator," in an article on the Australian naval defence proposals, writes that it is practically impossible for the Admiralty twice to reject the scheme of a local Australian navy. It cannot stout Australia's ecstatic ambitions, and the Admiralty ought to advise what is the best strategical arrangement possible on the basis of established facts, because the mills will close to-day, throwing 150,000 men and women.

A suspension of work for a fortnight is expected. It is hoped that in the meantime the cardroom hands will take a ballot.

The trade affected by the dispute in the cotton industry are spinners, cardroom-winders, and warpers.

LONDON, Sept. 19.

Letters received at Devonport indicate that the discontent on H.M.S. Gibraltar, now at Albany, Western Australia, was confined to a small section of the men, who complained of unfair treatment by junior officers.

BLUE JACKET IN IRONS.

ALBANY, Friday.

The culprit will be tried on charges of desertion and mutiny. It is understood that the guns were tampered with about a fortnight after leaving Plymouth, and as nothing could be ascertained, he was put on trial.

General Luard's only surviving son, Captain C. E. Luard, D.S.O. (Norfolk Regiment), lands at Southampton from South Africa to-day.

CRICKET AVERAGES.

CAMDEN, Saturday.

To-day Mr. McFadyen addressed a meeting of the Fresh Food and Ice Company's supply contractors to the north of London.

The following motion was carried—That we do not support the proposal of the Milk Suppliers' Association in the present crisis, and refuse to send milk to any company which dares to use it.

Dairy farmers were very hard hit, and it is a strike declared very little milk, if any, will be sent to the metropolis. During the strike, the Milk Suppliers' Association, being forwarded to Sydney while the trouble lasted. Farmers say that as the association is characterised as usual and unfair that while the producer receives only 7d per gallon for milk, the distributing companies take 10d per gallon to vend it.

The following resolution was carried unanimously, and adopted—That this meeting demands that the Milk Suppliers' Association be disbanded, and refuses to support any company which dares to use it.

be a crisis in the history of our race. If we were to overcome that crisis, and make it possible for us to increase our numbers, we must largely multiply our present handful of population. How did the little country overcame? The support in population of 40,000,000 in a few years, and that was greater than that which was greater even than in Australia. (Applause.) A person who has been here for some time, and who has seen the conditions, has come to the conclusion that that life of close settlement and neighbourly feeling, promoting all the happiness which came from social life, would be better than any other life. It would be better life than even we in Australia had. (Applause.) While they knew in Great Britain that their numbers were increasing, they thought that previous emigration should be to a land under the Union Jack, and not to a foreign country. From 100,000 to 1,000,000 of people have been sent to Australia, and we are encouraged to go to other lands where no flags were flying. Better for us to encourage them here, and build up the nation in Australia. We have a large number of men here who object to immigrants coming on the ground that it would leave less work for the men already here. This is a national obligation to our country, and made it a national obligation for the Federal and State Parliaments to assist them. The obligation would only come to an end when the population of Australia reached 100 million. That would be when we would be instantly prepared to receive another million. (Applause.)

AUSTRALIA'S DANGER.

When he read in that day's papers that the Prime Minister had laid up half a million of men in reserve for future contingencies he wondered what Australia was doing. Far better would it be to spend the money in a little more money required for defence, old-age pensions, and the like, and to perform the obligations which Australia had undertaken. (Applause.)

STILL THE "MEN OLD JOE."

While away from the men old Joe had to learn much. But in putting their views before the people of Great Britain he stood to gain so that he should be a credit to the land which he had come from, from which sprung. Unfortunately, too many men went to England, and by adopting a hectoring tone, tried to make Englishmen believe that they could deserve that, and that could teach creation. That sort of thing did a lot of harm. He was a smaller man to-day, coming from England than he was when he was a boy. (Applause.) Mr. Fisher stated that a good deal of inconvenience was caused here through the lack of such an efficient and compact committee as the N.C.S.N. Co. will in future make regulation easier, and to have better arrangements, some practical benefit. (Applause.) Although some people had tried to re-habitate him, and give him the name of "the same old Joe" as when he went away. (Applause.) Honours and titles changed him not. Although he was proud to have been a soldier of the King, and that which he appreciated above all others, was to get the wages and respect of the people. (Applause.) He had endeavoured to learn as much as he could, to speak for the N.C.S.N. Co., and to help his brethren, some practical benefit. (Applause.) ## LEURA-AJAX COLLISION.

NEW HYBRID GAME ALLEGED.

Inspector Hobie and the police of No. 1 division raided on Thursday night a hotel at Harris-street, Ultimo, which had for some time been suspected as a gambling resort of tramps. They were not found, but the police explored singly to find out whether anything illegal was being done. But a fortnight ago occurrences were noticed which seemed to indicate that the police were right.

Thursday night is the fortnightly pay night of the tramway employees, so at 9 p.m. Inspector Hobie and the police of No. 1 division raided on Thursday night a hotel at Harris-street, Ultimo, which had for some time been suspected as a gambling resort of tramps. They were not found, but the police explored singly to find out whether anything illegal was being done. But a fortnight ago occurrences were noticed which seemed to indicate that the police were right.

The move was a masterpiece of generalship. Like rats the attackers scuttled back to their train, only to find the light again. They were followed by the attack, but they had only gone a few yards when there was a short, sharp whistle, and the wheels began to roar.

The train was fairly started on the advancing squad. Seeing the picnickers were determined, the leader of the flower sellers wisely resorted to tactics. "Leave the flowers, and we'll let you go." At first the boys above thought they were being driven to meet them. But suddenly there was a scatter. A larrakin, grinning, dashed out to catch the first spool, which left Melbourne at 3 a.m., and some substituted liquor for sleep. The result was that while the large majority of the men were sound asleep, a few were wide awake, and the propeller was still running.

When the train reached Kangaroo Flat the drivers found the signals against him, and there was a dozen or so men, and a few women, who paid their own fares, and intended to make their homes in this State.
